

A Guide to Representing Yourself in the Family Court of Western Australia

Children's Cases

Disclaimer

1. The information contained in this guide is provided in good faith. However, the accuracy of the information cannot be guaranteed, as there may have been changes to the law since the guide was prepared.
2. The State of Western Australia, the Family Court of Western Australia and their employees and agents expressly disclaim any liability whatsoever to any person for any loss or damage arising, whether directly or indirectly, and whether or not as a consequence of negligence, from the contents or the use of this guide.
3. This guide has been prepared as a general guide. It is not a substitute for obtaining professional legal advice specific to your particular circumstances.

© "A guide to representing yourself in the Family Court of Western Australia"
FAMILY COURT OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA 2000

Revised December 2015

Please check the Family Court of Western Australia website www.familycourt.wa.gov.au for latest updates and/or revisions.

Foreword

Many people are unable to afford a lawyer to help them to resolve family disputes. They can be at a disadvantage because the law is complicated and court processes are sometimes difficult to understand.

This guide is designed to help those people who do not have a lawyer to present their cases in the Family Court of Western Australia. It is not a substitute for competent legal advice, but it is hoped the information provided will make it easier for you to navigate through the court system.

Judges and magistrates must always remain impartial and not appear to help one side of a dispute to the disadvantage of the other. Although the judge or magistrate can provide some assistance, it is expected that each party who does not have a lawyer will have tried their best to become familiar with this guide before coming to court.

The court has received much positive feedback about earlier editions of the guide. We would appreciate hearing from you about any way you feel that future editions might be improved.

Thanks are due to many people who have contributed to the new edition of this guide, including Principal Registrar David Monaghan, Acting Magistrate Laura De Maio, Registrar Leonie Forrest, Senior Research Officer Prue Hawkins, and my Legal Associates Kate Hesford and Kelly Merris.

Stephen Thackray

Chief Judge
Family Court of Western Australia

Important – Do I need a lawyer?

You may be at a disadvantage if you represent yourself, especially if the other party has a lawyer. The judicial officer must decide a case on the evidence presented by both sides. The judicial officer can question you, the other party and the witnesses about evidence, but is limited in the help that he or she can provide.

It is recommended that you are represented by a lawyer at trial. If that is not possible, you should at least try to obtain advice from a lawyer about your case at the earliest possible stage (see Where can I go for advice).

Contents

1. Introduction	1
What is this guide for?	1
The relevant legislation	2
2. About the court	3
How to contact the Family Court	3
Personal safety	3
Interpreters	3
Attending by electronic communication.....	3
How does the Family Court contact me?	4
What should I wear to court?	4
What should I take with me to court?	4
Who can come to court with me?	5
What time should I get to court?	5
How should I behave in court?.....	6
3. The relevant law for parenting orders	7
4. Preparation for trial	9
Evidence.....	9
Affidavits	9
Disclosure.....	10
Service	11
What orders do I want the court to make?	12
Getting witnesses to attend at trial	12
Papers for the judicial officer	14

5. When will my trial be held?	15
The readiness hearing.....	15
Callover	16
What if we reach an agreement after the trial date is set?.....	17
6. What happens during the trial?	18
Order of proceedings.....	18
Opening address or statement.....	19
How do I give my own evidence?.....	19
Calling witnesses and their evidence.....	19
How do I cross-examine a witness?.....	20
How do I re-examine a witness?	21
Closing address or statement	21
7. When is judgment given?	22
8. Where can I go for advice?	23
8. Legal information on the internet	24
Appendix A - Presumption of equal shared parental responsibility	25
Appendix B - Equal or substantial and significant time	26
Appendix C - Effect of parenting order that provides for shared parental responsibility	28
Appendix D - Best interests of the child	29
Appendix E - Subpoena to Department for Child Protection and Family Support	32
Appendix F - Attendance by electronic communication	33
Guide to legal terms	35

1. Introduction

What is this guide for?

This guide is not intended to be a substitute for professional legal advice.

This guide is intended for people representing themselves at trial in parenting cases (except in relation to child support and child maintenance). It will provide a brief overview of the court process and the relevant law. However, the focus will be on how to prepare your matter for trial, and the trial process itself.

There is a separate guide for people representing themselves at trial in property cases.

Other materials dealing with the earlier stages of proceedings are available from the Registry or online at www.familycourt.wa.gov.au. For example, if you are about to commence proceedings or are responding to an application, there are kits and brochures which outline how to prepare or oppose an application to the court. There are also brochures available on court procedures during the resolution stage of the application, such as the case assessment conference. (Note: Procedures in country areas may be different.)

If you have not yet filed an application or been served with an application, you should contact the Family Relationship Advice Line or one of the other organisations listed under Where can I go for advice?

There is a Guide to legal terms at the back, which provides some useful definitions.

The relevant legislation

If the child's parents were or are married, the relevant legislation is the Family Law Act 1975 (Cth). If the child's parents were never married, the Family Court Act 1997 (WA) applies (with some special exceptions). The Family Court has the power to resolve all parenting disputes whether the parents were married or not.

Important sections from these Acts are set out in the appendices to this guide. To access the full text of the Acts go to www.comlaw.gov.au (Family Law Act 1975 (Cth)) or www.slp.wa.gov.au (Family Court Act 1997 (WA)).

Various rules and regulations have been made under the two Acts, such as the Family Law Rules 2004 (Cth) and the Family Court Rules 1998 (WA). These can be accessed in full text on the same websites as above, under the heading "legislative instruments" or "subsidiary legislation".

The court also issues Case Management Guidelines and Practice Directions, which give guidance about practice and procedure in the Family Court of Western Australia and the Magistrates Court of Western Australia. These are available from our website.

2. About the court

Your case will be heard in the Family Court of Western Australia by a judge, or in the Magistrates Court of Western Australia by a family law magistrate. The two courts work closely together in the same building and cases move seamlessly between them.

How to contact the Family Court

You should address any correspondence to:

The Principal Registrar
Family Court of Western Australia
GPO Box 9991
PERTH WA 6848

Facsimile: (08) 9224 8360

Note: You must send each other party a copy of any correspondence you send to the court, including the Independent Children's Lawyer (if appointed).

Personal safety

The Family Court has a Family Violence Policy, which can be downloaded from our website.

If you are concerned about your physical safety or the safety of one of your witnesses, you should notify the Principal Registrar in writing using the template letter on our website, preferably at least 14 days prior to your court attendance. Despite the note above, it is not necessary for you to send a copy of this particular letter to the other party.

You may wish to consider attending court by telephone or video link. If you become concerned for your safety whilst in the court building, please inform court staff as soon as possible.

Interpreters

If you, or a witness, need an interpreter, please contact the court as soon as possible after your application or response is filed to make the appropriate arrangements.

Attending by electronic communication

The Family Court has facilities available for people to attend court by electronic communication, such as telephone or video link.

If you need to use these facilities to attend a court event, you must write to the court at least seven days before to ask permission and lodge a Request to Attend by Electronic Communication form.

However, if you need to use these facilities at a trial, you should tell the judicial officer at the readiness hearing and, unless ordered otherwise, you must make an application to the court at least 28 days before the trial (Application in a Case – Form 2 and an affidavit in support).

Specific information (see Appendix F) must be included when seeking permission to attend a trial by electronic communication.

The court may order that one or both of the parties pay the cost of using the facilities.

If you attend court by telephone or video link, make sure that you are in a quiet place, away from distractions.

For more information on the court's facilities for electronic communication, ask at the Registry.

How does the Family Court contact me?

You must always let the court know your current contact address and telephone number.

If you change your contact address or telephone number before your case is finished, you must file and serve a new Notice of Address for Service – Form 8. If you do not let the court know your current contact details, you may miss important communications and your next court event may proceed without you.

What should I wear to court?

You should dress comfortably. The minimum standard of dress is neat casual, which includes appropriate footwear. No hats or sunglasses should be worn in the courtroom.

What should I take with me to court?

- Copies of all documents that:
 - You have filed and served.
 - You have received from the other party during the proceedings.
 - Have been provided to you by the court.

These should be organised so that you can find any document easily.

- Any other documents that you want to use, such as a document to put to a witness in cross-examination.
- All of the documents you have disclosed and all disclosure documents you have received from any other party.
- Pens and paper.
- This guide.

Who can come to court with me?

You can bring people to the court to support you, but they might be asked to wait outside the courtroom. If your support people and witnesses are inside the courtroom, they should sit in the gallery at the back. Hearings are open to the public unless the judicial officer orders otherwise.

Conferences, including case assessment conferences and child dispute conferences, are held in a conference room and can only be attended by the parties, their legal representatives and court staff.

Persons under 18 years of age are not allowed in the courtroom without permission from the judicial officer. The court has a child-minding service between certain hours. For more information about this service, see our website.

During a trial, the judicial officer will usually make an order requiring all witnesses to remain out of the courtroom until they have given their evidence. You or the other party can request that such an order be made. Once the witness has given their evidence, they may remain in the courtroom for the remainder of the trial.

What time should I get to court?

You should be ready and waiting at the Family Court at least 15 minutes before your listed time. If you have not attended the Family Court previously, it is advisable to allow plenty of time to secure parking and locate the relevant courtroom. Cases may be heard in another court building near the Family Court.

When you arrive, you should go to the reception desk on the floor where your case is listed to be held and report to the court officer at the desk. All cases listed each day are displayed on electronic noticeboards around the court.

Your case might not be called until after the time it was listed, so make sure you are able to remain at court until your case has been heard.

How should I behave in court?

- If you are the applicant, you sit behind the right hand microphone. The respondent sits on the left. If an Independent Children's Lawyer has been appointed in your case, they will sit at the centre microphone.
- When the judicial officer enters the court, you should stand and remain standing until told to be seated by the court officer.
- You should bow your head slightly to the judicial officer as they take their seat at the bench. If you need to enter or exit the courtroom, it is a courtesy to briefly bow towards the judicial officer if they are present.
- You should call the judicial officer "your Honour", "Sir" or "Ma'am".
- If you are referring to a judicial officer when speaking to a witness, refer to the judicial officer as "his Honour" or "her Honour".
- Do not speak when the judicial officer is speaking.
- You should stand when speaking to the judicial officer, unless you have been advised it is acceptable to remain seated while speaking. Only one of the parties should be speaking at one time.
- You should also stand when you are examining or cross-examining a witness.
- When you are speaking, remain behind your microphone. The microphones are used to record the proceedings. They do not magnify your voice, so try to speak in a manner that is clear and precise so everyone in the courtroom can hear you.
- If you want to show a document to a witness or the judicial officer, say so and hold it out for the court officer to take it to them.
- Do not interrupt the other party (unless you are engaging in cross-examination, in which case you may interrupt if they are not answering the question you have asked or are giving evidence that you consider is legally inadmissible).
- No food or drink is allowed (including chewing gum). Water is usually provided.
- Mobile phones and pagers must be switched off, not placed on silent, because they may interfere with the recording of the proceedings. If you need to refer to your phone for some purpose in the hearing, you must ask permission from the judicial officer.
- A court officer may be able to help if you have questions about what to do, but they are not legally trained and cannot give you legal advice.

3. The relevant law for parenting orders

The relevant law to be applied in applications for parenting orders is set out in Part VII of the Family Law Act 1975 (Cth) (“FLA”) if the child’s parents were or are married, or Part 5 of the Family Court Act 1997 (WA) (“FCA”) if they were never married. The objects of both Acts are to ensure that the best interests of the child are met by:

- Ensuring that children have the benefit of both of their parents having a meaningful involvement in their lives, to the maximum extent consistent with the best interests of the child.
- Protecting children from physical or psychological harm from being subjected to, or exposed to, abuse, neglect or family violence.
- Ensuring that children receive adequate and proper parenting to help them achieve their full potential.
- Ensuring that parents fulfil their duties, and meet their responsibilities, concerning the care, welfare and development of their children.

In deciding whether to make a particular parenting order in relation to a child, the court must regard the best interests of the child as the paramount consideration.

Both Parts in the Acts are substantially the same in effect:

- When making a parenting order, the court must generally apply a presumption that it is in the best interests of a child for the parents to have equal shared parental responsibility for that child: See s 61DA FLA, s 70A FCA and Appendix A.
- This presumption does not apply if there are reasonable grounds to believe that a parent (or a person who lives with a parent) has engaged in abuse of the child (or another child who was at the time a member of the parent’s family, or that other person’s family), or has engaged in family violence: See s 61DA(2) FLA, s 70A(2) FCA and Appendix A.
- This presumption can be rebutted by evidence that it would not be in the best interests of the child for the parents to have equal shared parental responsibility: See s 61DA(4) FLA, s 70A(4) FCA and Appendix A.
- If the court decides that the parents will have equal shared parental responsibility, it must consider whether it would be practicable and in the child’s best interests for the child to spend equal time with each parent: See s 65DAA(1) FLA, s 89AA(1) FCA and Appendix B.

- If the court decides not to make an order for the child to spend equal time with each of the parents, then it must consider whether it would be practicable and in the child's best interests for the child to spend "substantial and significant time" with a parent: See s 65DAA(2) FLA, s 89AA(2) FCA and Appendix B. What constitutes "substantial and significant time" is defined in s 65DAA(3) FLA and s 89AA(3) FCA.
- The court is not obliged to make an order for equal time or "substantial and significant time". For example, the evidence may establish that it is not in a child's best interests to spend any time with one of the parents.
- The factors the court must consider in making a parenting order are set out in s 60CC FLA and s 66C FCA: See Appendix D.
- Children do not express their views personally in court. Instead, if it is appropriate for their views to be ascertained, they will have an interview with a family consultant or expert witness, who will prepare a report for the judicial officer. A copy of that report will be provided to all parties to the case.

4. Preparation for trial

Evidence

In most cases, there are rules relating to the way in which evidence is dealt with at trial. However, the rules of evidence in proceedings for parenting cases are relaxed, to ensure that the process avoids as much legal technicality as possible.

Affidavits

Your affidavit for trial should only contain facts relevant to your case, not arguments or opinions.

Procedural orders provide when an affidavit may be filed. An affidavit is a formal written statement that sets out the facts of your case and your evidence. You must swear or affirm that the contents of the affidavit are true. When you say something in an affidavit, it is as serious as saying it directly to the judicial officer while you are in the witness box in court. The following points are important:

- You are only allowed to file an affidavit with permission from the court, unless you are filing it with an application or response.
- A person under 18 years of age is not allowed to give evidence orally or by affidavit without permission from the court.
- Affidavits should usually only contain factual information about which the writer has personal knowledge. Affidavits should not contain opinions about a fact, unless the person swearing the affidavit is an expert. If another adult has personal knowledge of an important fact, you should try to obtain an affidavit from them.
- Affidavits must be typed. Each paragraph must be numbered, and each paragraph must, as far as possible, cover one particular fact or event.
- All affidavits must be sworn or affirmed before a justice of the peace, experienced lawyer or notary.
- If you want a witness to give evidence, they should provide an affidavit; they can only give oral evidence instead if the judicial officer gives permission, or if the witness refuses to sign an affidavit. You may have to subpoena a witness to ensure that they attend the trial (see Getting witnesses to attend at trial).

- The judicial officer can make an order striking out any part of an affidavit that is irrelevant, or otherwise improper. This means that the affidavit is treated as if the improper parts do not exist. If you think words should be struck out of an affidavit filed on behalf of the other party, you need to state your objection in writing to the court and the other party at least 14 days before the trial.

By the time you get to trial, you and the other party may have sworn or affirmed multiple affidavits, but you cannot use all of them as evidence at trial. You must make sure that all the evidence you want the judicial officer to receive is in your trial affidavit. Similarly, a new affidavit is required for each witness, unless permission has been given to rely on an affidavit provided for an earlier hearing.

If the other party has given notice that they want to cross-examine one of your witnesses, it is important that the witness is present at the trial.

All the facts you want the judicial officer to take into account must be set out in your affidavit and the affidavits of your witnesses. In all cases, the judicial officer will need to know a brief history of the relationship between the parties. In particular, you should include:

- The date when you and the other party began living together and/or married.
- The date of final separation and the dates of any other significant separation(s).
- The date of the divorce if you have been divorced.
- The date of birth of each party.
- The name(s) and date(s) of birth of any children who lived with you and the other party during the relationship.
- Every fact on which you rely that is relevant to the law set out in Appendix A, B, C and D.

For more information about affidavits, see the Affidavit Instructions brochure, which is available from the Registry or online.

Disclosure

Each party has a duty to give full and frank disclosure of all information relevant to the case in a timely manner. The rules of court set out what must be done in order to comply with this duty.

There may be serious consequences if you fail to comply with the duty of disclosure.

Please be aware that the judicial officer does not automatically receive all documents that have been disclosed by either party. If you wish to rely on disclosed evidence to support your case, you must ensure that it is part of your evidence, either by annexing it to an affidavit that has been filed, or by tendering it into evidence at trial.

For more information about disclosure, see the Duty of Disclosure in Family Law Cases brochure, which is available from the Registry or online.

Service

Whenever you file a document at the Family Court, a copy of that document must be served on each other party, including the Independent Children's Lawyer (if appointed).

If a document that has been filed is not served prior to the next court date, your matter may be adjourned to allow the other party time to respond to the document.

If you have been served with documents from the other party and do not appear at the next court date, the case may proceed without you and orders may be made without you being present.

The way you serve a document on another party will depend on the type of document. The simplest form of service is "ordinary service", which involves giving the document to the other party by hand, post or electronic communication, or through the other party's lawyer.

Certain documents must be served by "special service", which requires the following steps:

- The document must be given to the other party by hand, post or electronic communication, or through the other party's lawyer.
- After the document is handed over, the person being served must sign an Acknowledgment of Service – Form 6 and return it to the server.
- The server must complete an Affidavit of Service – Form 7 and have it sworn or affirmed before a justice of the peace, experienced lawyer or notary.
- The server must file the completed Affidavit of Service – Form 7 and Acknowledgment of Service – Form 6 before the next court date.

Documents must be served on another party promptly after they have been filed at the Registry office.

All documents filed in the proceedings must be served on the Independent Children's Lawyer if one has been appointed.

If you are concerned about personally handing a document to the other party, you can ask someone else who is at least 18 years old to do it, or pay a process server.

If you are unable to locate the other party to serve the documents, it is possible to apply to the court to dispense with service of the application.

For more information about service, see the Service of Documents Kit and the Dispensation of Service Kit which are available from the Registry or online.

What orders do I want the court to make?

The judicial officer is not obliged to grant the orders that either party is seeking. The judicial officer has the power to make any orders he or she considers are in the best interests of the children.

It is important that you, the other party and the judicial officer clearly understand the orders that you want the court to make.

You should consider whether you still seek the orders set out in your original application or response. If you want to amend your orders sought, you may need to seek permission from the judicial officer, depending on the stage of the proceedings. If the other party has no objection, the judicial officer will generally allow your amendment. However, your chances of having the amendment allowed are better if you give the court and the other party plenty of notice.

If you change the orders that you want at short notice, you may be ordered to pay the other party's costs; for example, if they spent money preparing for a trial in respect of orders that you no longer want.

Getting witnesses to attend at trial

Subpoena

If a person can provide the court with information or documents that will help your case, you can ask the court to issue a subpoena (Form 14 available from the Registry or online). A subpoena can require a person to either:

- Bring documents.
- Give evidence.
- Bring documents and give evidence.

You should seek leave from the court for the issue of any subpoena as soon as possible after the trial date is allocated. To seek leave you should lodge the subpoena (and copies) together with a letter to the Principal Registrar explaining:

- Why the evidence is relevant to your case.
- What, if any, attempts you have made to obtain the evidence from the other party or by other means.
- Whether the person that you want to subpoena has consented to the subpoena being issued.
- Any other matter which may assist in determining whether to grant leave for the issue of the subpoena.

If the court issues the subpoena, it must be promptly served by special service on the person you wish to subpoena. If you require the subpoenaed person to attend the trial, you must give them conduct money to cover the cost of travelling to the court.

If you are serving the Department for Child Protection and Family Support with a subpoena, you must provide them with certain information. For the required information, see Appendix E.

If you are seeking to issue a subpoena against a Family Dispute Resolution Practitioner, a family counsellor, or an employee of Anglicare, Centrecare or Relationships Australia, your covering letter to the court should certify that you have made reasonable efforts to discuss with that person:

- The possible consequences of complying with the subpoena, including the impact on the children or family involved.
- Any objection that might be made to the subpoena.
- The costs that may be sought to comply with the subpoena.
- Alternative means by which the evidence may be provided to the court.

It is important to understand that any document lodged with the court under a subpoena does not automatically become part of the evidence. If you want the court to receive the document as evidence, you must seek to tender it in evidence during the trial. If the court has given you permission to photocopy the subpoenaed documents, you should make copies of any documents that you intend to tender, so there are copies for the witness, each other party and the judicial officer. There are rules about whether documents produced under subpoena can be received as part of the evidence.

For more information on subpoenas, see the Subpoena brochure and Subpoena Kit, which are available from the Registry or online.

Notifying your intention to cross-examine

If you want to question any of the other party's witnesses at trial, you should make this known at the readiness hearing.

Each party should confirm their intention to question witnesses by giving the other party a written notice, at least 14 days before the trial, stating the name(s) of the person(s) required to attend the trial for cross-examination.

Each party must ensure that all witnesses required for cross-examination are present at the trial. If the witness does not attend, the court may refuse to consider their affidavit, limit the use of the affidavit or adjourn the proceedings.

If a witness is not required for cross-examination, the judicial officer is entitled to assume that their evidence is accepted as being accurate.

Expert witnesses

Qualified expert witnesses may provide independent evidence to help the judicial officer decide an issue in dispute. The court will generally allow evidence from only one expert witness in relation to a specific issue.

If an expert opinion is necessary in your case, you and the other party should endeavour to agree to jointly instruct a single expert witness to prepare a report for the court. Parties are equally responsible for payment of the single expert witness's fee, unless the court orders otherwise.

If you and the other party cannot agree on a single expert witness, you should apply to the court as soon as possible.

Expert witnesses will require you and/or the other party to pay their expenses for their time at court. To limit the costs associated with an expert witness waiting at court, you may ask the judicial officer if the witness can give evidence at a specific time. You should make this request at the earliest opportunity.

Papers for the judicial officer

You may be ordered to file and serve "papers for the judge" or "papers for the magistrate" prior to the trial. In this guide, these papers are referred to as "papers for the judicial officer". In parenting matters, papers for the judicial officer consist of:

- A chronology of relevant events.
- A list of the affidavits and other court documents that you intend to rely on.
- A list of the authorities (legal precedents) that you intend to rely on (if any).
- A brief statement of the issues that need to be decided at trial.
- A brief summary of your case relating to each of the relevant factors mentioned in s 60CC(2)-(3) FLA / s 66C(2)-(3) FCA. (See The relevant law for parenting orders and Appendix A, B, C and D.)

The papers for the judicial officer do not need a cover sheet, but should be clearly marked with the names of the parties, the court file number and the date of your trial. You must provide a copy to each other party.

Examples for you to follow can be found in the Papers for the Judicial Officer brochure, which is available from the Registry or online.

The papers for the judicial officer are not evidence. They are designed to assist the judicial officer to understand the issues that need to be decided, and must only refer to matters set out in the affidavit evidence.

5. When will my trial be held?

If you and the other party are unable to reach an agreement, your case will need to proceed to a trial. The judicial officer will make directions setting out what needs to be done before the trial, such as the filing and service of trial affidavits. Before a trial date is set, there will usually be a readiness hearing.

The readiness hearing

The readiness hearing is a procedural hearing to make sure your case is ready for trial. You will be given notice of the date of your readiness hearing at least two months prior. Readiness hearings are conducted by the managing magistrate or a registrar.

A readiness hearing is not an opportunity to negotiate, and the judicial officer will not assist in settlement discussions at this hearing. However, if the parties arrive at the readiness hearing with an agreement, the judicial officer can make orders by consent.

How to prepare for the readiness hearing

It is very important that you file all your affidavits on time.

At previous court appearances, the judicial officer would have made procedural orders telling you what you need to do prior to your readiness hearing. Generally, the procedural orders will provide a timetable for the filing and service of trial affidavits.

At least seven days before the readiness hearing (unless earlier directions state otherwise), each party must file and serve an Undertaking as to Disclosure (with a list of the documents disclosed attached), confirming that they have complied with their duty of disclosure.

It is very important that you understand your duty of disclosure. For more information see the Duty of Disclosure in Family Law Cases brochure available from the Registry or online.

At the readiness hearing you should be ready to answer questions about:

- The main issues of fact or law relevant to your case.
- Whether you propose amending your application or response.
- Whether you have complied with all previous orders, including in relation to the filing of your documents for trial.
- How many witnesses will be needed at trial, and which of the other party's witnesses you intend to cross-examine.
- The likely length of the trial.

- Whether interpreters are required for the trial.
- Whether telephone or video link facilities will be required.
- Whether a bring-up order is required for a witness who is in prison.

What happens at the readiness hearing

If the judicial officer decides the matter is ready and the parties have filed all their documents, then your case will be listed for trial or sent to callover. Cases that are expected to run for two days or less will normally be heard by the managing magistrate and have a trial date set at the readiness hearing. Cases that have the potential to run for more than two days will normally be placed into a callover.

If one party has failed to file their documents in time, the judicial officer may still place the matter into the callover for a trial date to ensure that the party who has complied will not be prejudiced. Alternatively, the judicial officer may refer the matter to the duty judge or duty magistrate for orders, including orders striking out the defaulting party's application or response and giving the other party permission to proceed with the case as if it is undefended.

If both parties have failed to file their documents by the readiness hearing, the case may be sent to the duty judge or duty magistrate, who may make further procedural orders dismissing the case.

Callover

You must attend the callover or have someone attend on your behalf, as it is not practical to conduct telephone or video links.

If your trial is not being heard by the managing magistrate, then the next step after a readiness hearing is for a trial date to be set at a callover. Prior to the callover, you should file a Callover Certificate – Form NP12, which is available from the Registry or online.

The callover is conducted by a judge. It can take up to two hours because a large number of cases are allocated trial dates in each callover. You or your representative should attend with a list of all dates when you or your witnesses will be unavailable to attend trial in the following three months.

You will need to listen carefully for your name to be called by the judge. When your name is called, you must make your way quickly to one of the microphones. The judge will suggest a trial date and you have to advise quickly whether that date suits you and your witnesses. There is no time at the callover to deal with any issues other than the allocation of the trial date.

Sometimes there are insufficient trial dates for all cases in the callover, or the dates available may be unsuitable. If this happens, your case is likely to be stood over to the next available callover, which could be in about one or two months.

The date allocated for trial is likely to be at least six weeks after the callover. Your trial will usually be listed to a “not before” date, which means that your trial will not start before that date, but it may start on or after that date, depending how long it takes the court to finish other trials listed before yours.

If you have been given a “not before” trial date, it is important that you contact the court after 2pm on the day before the allocated trial date, to find out when it is expected that your trial will start. If your trial does not start on time, it may start in the following days at very short notice. You should warn your witnesses and support people that the trial may be delayed and that some flexibility of availability may be required on their part.

If you want a fixed starting date for your trial, you must request this at the readiness hearing or note it on your callover certificate. Generally, fixed starting dates are only given where parties or witnesses have to travel from interstate or overseas for the trial.

At callover you will be told the name of the judicial officer who will be conducting your trial; however, the case may be moved to another judicial officer closer to the trial date.

What if we reach an agreement after the trial date is set?

You and the other party can resolve your matter by agreement at any time before the delivery of judgment, including before and during the trial. If you reach an agreement, you should inform the court as soon as possible, so the court's time is not wasted.

To formalise your agreement, you should file or hand up a minute of consent orders, signed by each party, setting out the terms of the agreement. If the judicial officer is satisfied that the agreement is appropriate, consent orders will be made. (It is not necessary to file an Application for Consent Orders – Form 11 if you already have current proceedings.)

6. What happens during the trial?

The judicial officer will manage the conduct of the trial. If you are unsure how to proceed at any stage, do not be afraid to ask the judicial officer. The judicial officer may intervene to assist you, or to move the proceedings along by reminding you to focus on relevant issues. It is important to remember that the judicial officer is not your lawyer, and cannot give you any legal advice.

Order of proceedings

After the judicial officer deals with any preliminary administrative issues that need attention, the usual order of proceedings is as follows:

Applicant's case

1. Applicant makes opening address (if the judicial officer permits).
2. Applicant calls first witness (usually the applicant himself or herself).
3. Applicant's witness gives evidence.
4. Respondent may cross-examine that witness.
5. Applicant may re-examine that witness (only about matters arising out of cross-examination).
6. Applicant calls next witness.
7. Repeat steps 3 to 6 until applicant has called all witnesses.

Respondent's case

8. Respondent makes opening address (if the judicial officer permits).
9. Respondent calls first witness (usually the respondent himself or herself).
10. Respondent's witness gives evidence.
11. Applicant may cross-examine that witness.
12. Respondent may re-examine that witness (only about matters arising out of cross-examination).
13. Respondent calls next witness.
14. Repeat steps 10 to 13 until respondent has called all witnesses.

Closing addresses

15. Respondent makes closing address.
16. Applicant makes closing address.

Opening address or statement

At the start of your case, you may be invited by the judicial officer to make a brief “opening address” or “opening statement”. Although you do not have to do this, it is an opportunity to outline your case.

In your opening address, you should briefly outline the issues to be decided and the orders you want. You should then indicate the significant matters that you intend to establish in presenting your case and the evidence that you will rely on.

You may ask the judicial officer for an order for “witnesses out of court”. This means that all the witnesses, except you and the other party, have to stay outside the courtroom until they give their evidence. It also prevents the witnesses from discussing the case until they have given their evidence.

Remember that what you say during your opening address is not part of the evidence. The only evidence the judicial officer will consider is what has been said in affidavits or in the witness box.

How do I give my own evidence?

When it is your turn to give evidence, the court officer will show you to the witness stand. Take everything you think you may need with you, including your affidavit, some paper and a pen. The court officer will lead you through the oath or affirmation, and then the judicial officer will help you commence your evidence by asking you to confirm the truth of your trial affidavit. You will be given a chance to correct any errors in your affidavit.

You generally will not be allowed to provide any further evidence to the judicial officer, unless the evidence could not have been included in your affidavit. For example, the judicial officer may allow you to give evidence about matters that arose after your trial affidavit was filed, but you must seek leave to do so.

If you wish to respond to matters raised in the affidavits of the other party that are not covered in your trial affidavit, you should ask for permission to do so before you are cross-examined by the other party.

Calling witnesses and their evidence

When it is time for your next witness to give evidence, tell the judicial officer the name of the witness you want to “call”. The court officer will then “call” the name of the witness outside the courtroom and direct them to the witness box.

All the evidence from your witnesses should be in their affidavits. Therefore, you simply have to ask them their name, address and occupation, and whether their affidavit is true and correct. However, you may ask the judicial officer for permission to ask your witness further questions before they are cross-examined, if for example:

- Important evidence has been left out.
- Important events have occurred since the affidavit was filed.
- There are errors in the affidavit.
- You want the witness to give evidence about matters raised in the affidavits filed by the other party, or about matters that have come up in evidence during the trial.

If the witness you have called refused to give an affidavit, you may ask the judicial officer for permission to have them give oral evidence. If permission is granted, you may then ask the witness a series of questions to allow them an opportunity to give the evidence you consider is relevant to the case.

When you are asking questions of your own witness, you are not permitted to “lead” them – in other words, ask a question in a way that infers the answer you want them to give. For example you should ask, “What did you do on Monday?” rather than “You went to the shops on Monday, didn’t you?”

How do I cross-examine a witness?

Cross-examination is not an opportunity for you to harass, embarrass or belittle a witness.

If you do not dispute a witness’s evidence, there is no need to cross-examine them. If you do not cross-examine a witness about something they said in their affidavit or oral evidence, it is open to the judicial officer to conclude that you do not dispute it.

When cross-examining a witness, you should ask questions and not make statements. Although you cannot ask “leading questions” of your own witnesses, it is quite permissible to do so when you are cross-examining the other party’s witnesses. For example, you can ask “You went to the shops on Monday, didn’t you?” as opposed to “What did you do on Monday?”

Each question asked in cross-examination should be brief and directed at one point at a time. You should plan your cross-examination in advance, but be ready to modify your plan as you listen to the answers. Your aim is to show the court that the witness’s evidence should not be accepted because they are mistaken, or cannot authoritatively say the things they have said.

If you allege something different from a witness, it is important that you put your version of events to them. For example, you could say: “My evidence is that I used to take our daughter to kindergarten every day. That is true isn’t it?”

In cross-examination, you can present to the witness any document that you consider contradicts their evidence. For example, you may have kindergarten records that show you took your daughter there every day. If you intend to show the witness a document, you should have copies for the witness, each other party and the judicial officer.

Your cross-examination of a witness is not limited to the evidence given by the witness, but any questions should be relevant to:

- The matters in dispute.
- The considerations that the judicial officer must take into account.
- The witness's credibility.

While your witnesses are being cross-examined, you should make notes, especially of things you wish to raise in re-examination.

If the trial is adjourned while a witness is giving evidence or being cross-examined, you must not discuss their evidence with them. It is therefore safest to avoid talking to the witness at all in any adjournment, including lunch breaks.

How do I re-examine a witness?

Once the cross-examination of your witness is finished, the judicial officer will ask whether you want to re-examine the witness.

Re-examination is only allowed about matters that came up in cross-examination. It is not an opportunity to have a witness repeat something they have already said clearly in evidence. It is an opportunity to clarify evidence that was unclear; correct obvious errors; or give the witness a chance to give a full answer where they may have been cut off during cross-examination. Once again, you cannot ask your own witness any "leading questions".

Closing address or statement

Once you and the other party have presented all of the evidence, you will each have an opportunity to make a "closing address" or "closing statement".

If there is important disputed evidence, you should tell the judicial officer why he or she should accept the evidence on which you are relying. You should outline the findings of fact that you want the court to make and tell the judicial officer why he or she should make the orders that you want.

Ideally you will relate your closing remarks to the legislation in the appendices of this guide and mention any relevant precedents. However, the judicial officer knows you are not a lawyer and will understand if you cannot do this.

7. When is judgment given?

The judicial officer may give judgment and make orders at the end of the closing addresses. This may be after a short adjournment to give the judicial officer a chance to review the evidence. If the judgment is given this way, you may request a written copy of the reasons for judgment, which will be sent to you after the judicial officer has edited them.

Alternatively, the judicial officer may reserve his or her decision to a later date. The court will inform you when the judgment is ready to be delivered and whether you need to attend. The judicial officer may want the parties to attend if he or she wants further input in relation to the details of the orders to be made.

If you are not required to attend court for the delivery of the judgment, a copy of it will be sent to you by post. However, it is your right to attend if you wish, in which case a copy will be given to you immediately.

8. Where can I go for advice?

Below is a list of places you can go for advice about family law matters; however some of those listed will not be able to provide advice about financial issues.

Family Relationship Centres	Family Relationships Online Internet: www.familyrelationships.gov.au
Family Court Counselling and Consultancy Service	Telephone: (08) 9224 8248 or toll free: 1800 199 228
Family Relationship Advice Line	If you have general questions in relation to children’s issues you can phone the Family Relationship Advice Line from 8am until 8pm on Monday to Friday and 10am until 4pm on Saturdays on 1800 050 321.
Family Lawyers	If you are looking for a lawyer who specialises in family law, contact the Family Law Practitioners Association of WA by visiting www.flpawa.asn.au/accredited_specialists or calling The Law Society of Western Australia on (08) 9324 8600.
Legal Aid Western Australia	32 St Georges Terrace, Perth Telephone: 1300 650 579 (toll free) Internet: www.legalaid.wa.gov.au You may be eligible for representation and you can obtain information over the phone.
Community Legal Centres	Community Legal Centres Association (WA) Telephone: (08) 9221 9322 Internet: www.naclc.org.au Community Legal Centres provide legal advice and offer assistance to people with low incomes. The Community Legal Centres Association (WA) can refer you to the Community Legal Centre closest to you.

9. Legal information on the internet

To access legal information over the Internet you might try the following websites:

Family Court of Western Australia	www.familycourt.wa.gov.au
You can download court forms and brochures from this website. You can also access the daily court list and the court’s Case Management Guidelines. The site also provides answers to frequently asked questions.
Family Court of Australia	www.familycourt.gov.au
This site provides some useful legal information, tips for legal research and links to other online legal resources. However, when using this site it is important to remember that there are differences between processes in the Family Court of Australia and the Family Court of Western Australia.
Australian Law Online	www.law.gov.au
This site is provided by the Commonwealth Attorney General’s Department and gives you access to legal information and referral services.
Legal Aid Western Australia	www.legalaid.wa.gov.au
Legal Aid WA has a program called “When Separating”, which includes videos and helpful information.	www.legalaid.wa.gov.au/whenseparating

Appendix A – Presumption of equal shared parental responsibility

Family Law Act 1975 (Cth) (child of a marriage) / Family Court Act 1997 (WA) (if the parents never married). The provisions of both Acts are substantially the same.

Section 61DA / Section 70A

- (1) When making a parenting order in relation to a child, the court must apply a presumption that it is in the best interests of the child for the child's parents to have equal shared parental responsibility for the child.
- (2) The presumption does not apply if there are reasonable grounds to believe that a parent of the child (or a person who lives with a parent of the child) has engaged in:
 - (a) abuse of the child or another child who, at the time, was a member of the parent's family (or that other person's family); or
 - (b) family violence.
- (3) When the court is making an interim order, the presumption applies unless the court considers that it would not be appropriate in the circumstances for the presumption to be applied when making that order.
- (4) The presumption may be rebutted by evidence that satisfies the court that it would not be in the best interests of the child for the child's parents to have equal shared parental responsibility for the child.

Appendix B – Equal or substantial and significant time

Family Law Act 1975 (Cth) (child a marriage) / Family Court Act 1997 (WA) (if the parents never married). The provisions of both Acts are substantially the same.

Section 65DAA / Section 89AA

- (1) ... if a parenting order provides (or is to provide) that a child's parents are to have equal shared parental responsibility for the child, the court must:
 - (a) consider whether the child spending equal time with each of the parents would be in the best interests of the child; and
 - (b) consider whether the child spending equal time with each of the parents is reasonably practicable; and
 - (c) if it is, consider making an order to provide (or including a provision in the order) for the child to spend equal time with each of the parents.
- (2) ... if:
 - (a) a parenting order provides (or is to provide) that a child's parents are to have equal shared parental responsibility for the child; and
 - (b) the court does not make an order (or include a provision in the order) for the child to spend equal time with each of the parents; thenthe court must;
 - (c) consider whether the child spending substantial and significant time with each of the parents would be in the best interests of the child; and
 - (d) consider whether the child spending substantial and significant time with each of the parents is reasonably practicable; and
 - (e) if it is, consider making an order to provide (or including a provision in the order) for the child to spend substantial and significant time with each of the parents.
- (3) For the purposes of subsection (2) a child will be taken to spend substantial and significant time with a parent only if:
 - (a) the time the child spends with the parent includes both:
 - (i) days that fall on weekends and holidays; and
 - (ii) days that do not fall on weekends and holidays; and

- (b) the time the child spends with the parent allows the parent to be involved in:
 - (i) the child's daily routine; and
 - (ii) occasions and events that are of particular significance to the child; and
- (c) the time the child spends with the parent allows the child to be involved in occasions and events that are of special significance to the parent. ...

Appendix C – Effect of parenting order that provides for shared parental responsibility

Family Law Act 1975 (Cth) (child of a marriage) / Family Court Act 1997 (WA) (if the parents never married). The provisions of both Acts are substantially the same.

Section 65DAC / Section 89AC

- (1) This section applies if, under a parenting order:
 - (a) 2 or more persons are to share parental responsibility for a child; and
 - (b) the exercise of that parental responsibility involves making a decision about a major long-term issue in relation to the child.
- (2) The order is taken to require the decision to be made jointly by those persons.
- (3) The order is taken to require each of those persons:
 - (a) to consult the other person in relation to the decision to be made about that issue; and
 - (b) to make a genuine effort to come to a joint decision about that issue.
- (4) To avoid doubt, this section does not require any other person to establish, before acting on a decision about the child communicated by one of those persons, that the decision has been made jointly.

Appendix D – Best interests of the child

Family Law Act 1975 (Cth) (child of a marriage) / Family Court Act 1997 (WA) (if the parents never married). The provisions of both Acts are substantially the same.

In deciding what is in the best interests of the child, the Court must consider the following matters:

Section 60CC / Section 66C

- (1) Subject to subsection (5), in determining what is in the child's best interests, the court must consider the matters set out in subsections (2) and (3).
- (2) The primary considerations are:
 - (a) the benefit to the child of having a meaningful relationship with both of the child's parents;
and
 - (b) the need to protect the child from physical or psychological harm from being subjected to, or exposed to, abuse, neglect or family violence.
- (2A) In applying the considerations set out in subsection (2), the court is to give greater weight to the consideration set out in paragraph (2)(b).
- (3) Additional considerations are:
 - (a) any views expressed by the child and any factors (such as the child's maturity or level of understanding) that the court thinks are relevant to the weight it should give to the child's views;
 - (b) the nature of the relationship of the child with:
 - (i) each of the child's parents; and
 - (ii) other persons (including any grandparent or other relative of the child);
 - (c) the extent to which each of the child's parents has taken, or failed to take, the opportunity:
 - (i) to participate in making decisions about major long-term issues in relation to the child;
and
 - (ii) to spend time with the child; and
 - (iii) to communicate with the child;
 - (ca) the extent to which each of the child's parents has fulfilled, or failed to fulfil, the parent's obligation to maintain the child;

- (d) the likely effect of any changes in the child's circumstances, including the likely effect on the child of any separation from:
 - (i) either of his or her parents; or
 - (ii) any other child, or other person (including any grandparent or other relative of the child), with whom he or she has been living;
- (e) the practical difficulty and expense of a child spending time with and communicating with a parent and whether that difficulty or expense will substantially affect the child's right to maintain personal relations and direct contact with both parents on a regular basis;
- (f) the capacity of:
 - (i) each of the child's parents; and
 - (ii) any other person (including any grandparent or other relative of the child);to provide for the needs of the child, including any emotional and intellectual needs;
- (g) the maturity, sex, lifestyle and background (including lifestyle, culture and traditions) of the child and of either of the child's parents, and any other characteristics of the child that the court thinks are relevant;
- (h) if the child is an Aboriginal or a Torres Strait Islander child:
 - (i) the child's right to enjoy his or her Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander culture (including the right to enjoy that culture with other people who share that culture); and
 - (ii) the likely impact any proposed parenting order under this Part will have on that right;
- (i) the attitude to the child, and to the responsibilities of parenthood, demonstrated by each of the child's parents;
- (j) any family violence involving the child or a member of the child's family;
- (k) if a family violence order applies, or has applied, to the child or a member of the child's family – any relevant inferences that can be drawn from the order, taking into account the following:
 - (i) the nature of the order;
 - (ii) the circumstances in which the order was made;
 - (iii) any evidence admitted in proceedings for the order;
 - (iv) any findings made by the court in, or proceedings for, the order;
 - (v) any other relevant matter;

- (l) whether it would be preferable to make the order that would be least likely to lead to the institution of further proceedings in relation to the child;
 - (m) any other fact or circumstance that the court thinks is relevant.
- (5) If the court is considering whether to make an order with the consent of all the parties to the proceedings, the court may, but is not required to, have regard to all or any of the matters set out in subsection (2) or (3).
- (6) For the purposes of paragraph (3)(h), an Aboriginal child's or a Torres Strait Islander child's right to enjoy his or her Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander culture includes the right:
 - (a) to maintain a connection with that culture; and
 - (b) to have the support, opportunity and encouragement necessary:
 - (i) to explore the full extent of that culture, consistent with the child's age and developmental level and the child's views; and
 - (ii) to develop a positive appreciation of that culture.

Appendix E – Subpoena to Department for Child Protection and Family Support

Family Court of Western Australia – Case Management Guidelines

72 Subpoena to Department for Child Protection

72.1 A party serving a subpoena seeking the production of a Department for Child Protection file or any part thereof shall provide to the Chief Executive Officer of the Department the following information with the service copy of the subpoena:

- (a) the full names of the parties to the proceedings and the full name of any children the subject of the proceedings, including any former names or aliases;
- (b) if the parties and child(ren) are legally represented, the names and contact details of the lawyers;
- (c) information as to whether the parties were or are married;
- (d) the current address of each of the parties and the child(ren);
- (e) the name of the person(s) with whom the child(ren) is (are) living at the time the subpoena is issued;
- (f) information about the knowledge each party has regarding the current address of the other party and the child(ren);
- (g) information regarding the existence of any restraining orders or family violence orders in respect of any of the parties or the child(ren) which are relevant to the proceedings; and
- (h) a list of persons who have sworn affidavits in respect of the proceedings.

Note: A request to issue a subpoena to the Department for Child Protection and Family Support will only be granted with permission of a judicial officer. Permission is to be sought by written request setting out the precise documents sought, or by application in open court. You should be aware that the court will not normally grant permission for the production of the entire file. If specific documents are sought, you should consider asking for the court to make an order under s 69ZW FLA or s 202K FCA for documents to be produced to the court from the Department for Child Protection and Family Support.

Appendix F – Attendance by electronic communication

To attend a trial by electronic communication, you must file an Application in a Case – Form 2 supported by an affidavit. The affidavit must include the following information, where relevant:

- (a) what the applicant seeks permission to do by electronic communication;
- (b) the kind of electronic communication to be used;
- (c) if the party proposes to give evidence, make a submission, or adduce evidence from a witness by electronic communication – the place from which the party proposes to give or adduce the evidence, or make the submission;
- (d) the facilities at the place mentioned in paragraph (c) that will enable all eligible persons present in that place to see or hear each eligible person in the place where the court is sitting;
- (e) if the applicant seeks to adduce evidence from a witness by electronic communication:
 - (i) whether an affidavit by the witness has been filed;
 - (ii) whether the applicant seeks permission for the witness to give oral evidence;
 - (iii) the relevance of the evidence to the issues;
 - (iv) whether the witness is an expert witness;
 - (v) the name, address and occupation of any person who is to be present when the evidence is given;
 - (vi) if the applicant proposes to refer the witness to a document, whether:
 - (A) the document has been filed; and
 - (B) the witness will have a copy of the document; and
 - (vii) whether an interpreter is required and, if so, what arrangements are to be made;
- (f) the expense of using the electronic communication, including any expense to the court, and the applicant's proposals for paying those expenses;
- (g) whether the other parties object to the use of electronic communication for the purpose specified in the application and, if so, the reason for the objection; ...

In addition to these requirements, a party who proposes to adduce evidence by electronic communication from a witness in a foreign country must satisfy the court:

- (a) that the party has read the information published by the Attorney-General's Department about its arrangements with other countries for the taking of evidence, to determine the attitude of the foreign country's government to the taking of evidence by electronic communication;

- (b) if the attitude of the foreign country's government to the taking of evidence by electronic communication cannot be ascertained from sources within Australia – that the party has made appropriate inquiries through diplomatic channels, a lawyer or a provider of technical facilities in the foreign country to determine that attitude;
- (c) whether permission is needed from the foreign country's government to adduce evidence from a witness in that country by electronic communication;
- (d) if permission is needed, whether permission has been granted or refused;
- (e) if permission has been refused, the reason for refusal; and
- (f) whether there are any special requirements for the adducing of evidence, including:
 - (i) the administration of an oath; and
 - (ii) the form of the oath.

Guide to legal terms

Set out below are explanations of some legal terms. Most of the terms are used in this guide, but some are words or expressions you may hear during your trial.

Admissible evidence

Not all evidence that is relevant is allowed to be put before the judicial officer. There may be legal reasons why some evidence cannot be admitted into evidence. You should seek legal advice if you have any doubt about the admissibility of evidence.

Affidavit

A formal written statement that is sworn or affirmed before a justice of the peace, experienced lawyer or notary, which sets out the facts of the case (the evidence).

Applicant

The person who begins the proceedings by filing an application.

Callover

A hearing where a number of cases are allocated trial dates by a judge.

Case assessment conference

At the first court event, if risk issues are identified, the parties will be directed to attend a case assessment conference. The conference is conducted outside the courtroom; however, the details of the conference are reported back to the managing magistrate. The purpose of the conference is to identify the issues in dispute, allow the parties to negotiate and formulate a case management plan. For more information, see the Case Assessment Conference brochure, which is available from the Registry or online.

Case Management Guidelines

Guidelines or directions issued by the court that specify certain matters of procedure and practice. They are available from the Registry or online.

Child dispute conference

A reportable conference conducted with a family consultant. Such conferences may be ordered by the court in circumstances where, for example, an interim agreement has been reached between the parties and the consultant wishes to assess how the arrangements are going.

Chronology

A list of significant events and the dates on which they occurred, in date order.

Conduct money

When a subpoena is served, the person serving it must provide the subpoenaed person with sufficient money to cover return travel by public transport from the person's place of work or residence to the court, and a reasonable allowance for accommodation and meals during the estimated time of attendance at the hearing or trial.

Costs order

When the court orders that one party must pay all or part of the other party's costs of preparing and/or presenting their case.

Disclosure

A process where one party provides the other party with a list of relevant documents in their possession, power or control.

Disclosure documents

Documents that you have in your possession, power or control that are relevant to your case must be disclosed to all other parties. "Possession, power and control" is a legal term which covers more than documents in your physical possession. Seek advice if you have questions about your obligations.

Expert witness

An expert is an independent person who has relevant specialised knowledge, based on their training, study and/or experience. An expert witness is an expert who has been instructed, in writing, to provide their opinion about a substantial issue in dispute. Important rules about expert evidence are contained in the rules of court.

Family consultant

A family consultant is a qualified person appointed as a staff member of the court, who has specialist knowledge and expertise in working with children and families who are experiencing relationship difficulties after separation. Family consultants can give you assistance and advice, but any dealings between you and a family consultant can be reported to the court.

Family Dispute Resolution

Family Dispute Resolution (FDR) is the legal term for services (such as mediation) that help couples affected by separation and divorce to sort out family disputes. FDR can help you to agree on a range of issues relating to property and your children.

Family Dispute Resolution Practitioner

A Family Dispute Resolution Practitioner (FDRP) is an independent person who is professionally trained to help people affected by separation or divorce in resolving their family law disputes.

File

To lodge a document in the Registry of the Family Court of WA and have it accepted for filing by the court. You should generally lodge the original document, along with a photocopy for yourself and a copy for each other party. The photocopies will be stamped and returned to you for your records and for service on the other party.

Hearing fee

This is the fee payable for trial days or hearing days. The amount of the fee changes from time to time, and is higher for a hearing before a judge than a magistrate. An order is usually made at a procedural hearing requiring the payment of the fee. If the fee is not paid, the trial may not proceed.

Inadmissible evidence

Evidence that cannot be taken into account because it infringes the rules of evidence. This includes evidence that is not relevant to a fact in issue in the proceedings, and evidence that is unreliable because of hearsay.

Independent Children's Lawyer

An Independent Children's Lawyer (ICL) is appointed by the court to represent the best interests of the child. There are guidelines that set out the circumstances in which an ICL might be appointed, such as cases involving high conflict or risk. The ICL might interview the child, but they do not have to follow the child's instructions and will form a view based on all the information available. You can speak to the ICL, but your conversations will not be confidential and may be reported back to the court.

Judicial officer

Either a judge or magistrate who is listed to hear your case. A judge usually deals with longer or more complex cases.

Leave of the court

Permission obtained from the court to do a particular thing, which would otherwise not be allowed.

Managing magistrate

The magistrate who is appointed to conduct and manage your case. Depending on the length of your trial and the complexity of your matter, the managing magistrate may conduct your trial, or the trial may be allocated to another judicial officer.

Minute of orders sought

A document setting out the orders that you want the court to make.

Notice of Address for Service

A court form (Form 8) which tells the court and the other party the address where documents can be served on you. You can get this form from the Registry or online.

Notice to Produce

The other party may have served this notice on you. It requires you to bring certain documents to your trial. You may also serve a Notice to Produce on the other party.

Parenting order

A parenting order is one that deals with parental responsibility for a child, including who a child is to live with, spend time with or communicate with.

Party/parties

All applicants and respondents named on an application are parties in those proceedings. Other people may occasionally be joined as parties as the proceedings progress.

Practice directions

Directions issued by the court about practices and procedures to be followed in all cases. They are available online.

Procedural hearing

These are hearings conducted by a judicial officer or registrar. The purpose of a procedural hearing is to make orders for the future conduct of the case.

Procedural orders

These are instructions (sometimes referred to as directions) from the court about what each party must do and when. The purpose of these orders is to ensure that the case is properly prepared for each stage of the court process, so the case is resolved as quickly and cheaply as possible. Standard procedural orders are made at each stage of the court process. Other procedural orders may be made at the request of a party in a case. If procedural orders are made, you must comply with them.

Readiness hearing

A hearing to monitor readiness for trial.

Registrar

An officer of the court who has limited decision making powers but who makes many procedural orders.

Registry

The main office of the court that accepts court documents for filing, which is located at Level 1, 150 Terrace Road, Perth.

Respondent

The person against whom an order has been sought in an application.

Service/serve

The legal term used to describe the giving or delivering of court documents to another person.

Setting down fee

This is the fee payable for setting down a trial and it includes the first day of trial. The fee is higher for a hearing before a judge than a magistrate. An order is usually made at a procedural hearing requiring the payment of the fee. If the fee is not paid, the trial may not proceed.

Submissions

Arguments presented to the court to persuade the court to make the orders you want.

Subpoena

A document issued by the court (usually at the request of a party), that requires a person to come to court to give evidence and/or provide documents to the court.

Sworn or affirmed

When you have made a solemn promise confirming the truth of your evidence. An affidavit must be sworn or affirmed before a justice of the peace, experienced lawyer or notary.

Tender

To present a document to the court and seek to have it admitted as evidence that you wish to rely on to prove part of your case.

Trial

The final hearing of a matter before a judicial officer.

Trial affidavit

The final affidavit filed before a trial, which should contain all relevant evidence that you want the judicial officer to consider when deciding your case.

Waiver of fees

If you hold certain Centrelink cards or can show financial hardship, you may not have to pay certain fees. You can get the form to apply for a waiver of the fees at the Registry or online.

Family Court of Western Australia

150 Terrace Road

PERTH WA 6000

www.familycourt.wa.gov.au